

NEW TESTAMENT

One Another Passages

Have you ever thought that the Bible did not say enough about marriage? If you removed every verse from Scripture that deals with marriage, you would still have enough Scriptural principles to make your marriage work. The problem is that when we read verses dealing with how to treat others, we usually do not include our mates in the “others” category.

The following is a list of Scripture passages not specifically spoken in the context of marriage, but which should be practiced by each Christian couple “one toward another.” Write down what each of the following verses says about your responsibility to the Christian to whom you are married. Begin every answer with the words, “I must” or “I should.”
